To Mrs. Merle Wilson and Miss Ada Maxson, the Senior Class of Johnston High School dedicates this 1958 Beaconite.

As we've journeyed the common way,
Your faith, your life, your friendship,

FACULTY

To the graduates of 1958, my congratulations.

As you finish this phase of your education, you are, no doubt, thinking more seriously of the future and what it holds. Each of you has one life in this world--so many years, days, hours, and minutes of happiness and sorrow and sleep. This much you owe to yourselves: to determine what you believe--just where you stand and why. Then you can develop a philosophy which will enable you to lead a good and satisfactory life.

Best wishes for your success--

Charles S. Varner

MEMORIES

HOBO

DAY

SENIOR CLASS HISTORY

On a fine (according to weathermen and parents) September day in 1945, the Class of '58 was born. About forty kids, under the command of Miss Larson, (the kindergarten teacher to most folk) were organized to do battle with the books. Only nine of this group -- Doris Fitz-simmons, Pauline Foshe, Sandra Pontious, Dora Kate Robinette, Marlin Eaton, Robert Kinsey, Stanly Perin, Howard Thompson, and Curtis Tingley -- have survived the 13-year battle.

Miss Moline took command the next fall. The group took on some new members -- Mary Heisler, Donna Lathrum, and Ted Leffler were among them -- and met and conquered its first objective -- to learn to read. Having the situation well in hand, some time was spent making models of animals and drawings of birds.

Another September came and went. The new "C. O.," Mrs. Wilson, presented the new objective -- to be able to communicate well. The main attack was made by the means of reading aloud and the flank attack was made with oral reports about trains given at a parents' coffee. What good public speakers the second-graders made! This was the first year at Johnston for Belinda Ware, Marvin Caruthers, and Gerald Foshe.

September, 1948, saw the new third-graders at Camp Dodge. They were secretly proud of the fact that they were the first third-graders at Camp Dodge and kind of pitied the seventh-graders who would never know how much fun it was there. Under the stern hand of Mrs. Warner, they tackled higher math (arithmetic). The names of Larry Elings, Gary Gibbons, and Paul Jensen were added to the list of those who made it.

Miss Orout took the reins of the little band the next year. The new members of the class included Rodney Galloway and James Johnson. Now fourth-graders, they felt grown-up and capable of almost anything. The math was made fun by games of mental arithmetic. Those who got the problems were allowed to leave first at the end of the class. O Boy!

Much to its dismay, the class was transferred back to Johnston the next year. The fifth-graders sorely missed Camp but carried wih them many fond memories of playing near the old "haunted" house, in or by the long culvert, and around the forbidden woods. There was only one consolation: Miss Orcutt had consented to be their teacher this year too.

The next fall the class found itself divided: Mrs. Manny taking charge of one half; Mrs. Roper, the other. The salt water taffy some of the sixth-graders made, did not ever get hard, but they did have lots of fun pulling the gooey stuff. And the smell could have been matched in only one way -- a smelly chemistry experiment.

September, 1952, saw the new seventh-graders trying hard to become new eighth-graders. They did lose the magazine contest but were confident they could do better next year. Until they got their second chance, they decided to make the most of the advantages of Junior High which included such things as parties, physical education, and two basketball teams. Mrs. Cassaday, Mrs. Moyle, and Mr. Herrick saw them through that stormy year.

Under Mrs. Kenyon and Mr. Herrick the group tried to make up for its previous loss. However, luck plus a big seventh grade class was against them. To remove the sting of defeat, the eighth graders decided to do something never done before; write the history of Johnston. They finished it in the spring, just before the grand finale -- graduation. They felt very grown-up as they received their diplomas. They felt they were ready for high school.

In the fall of 1954, the battle took its greatest number of casualties causing the freshmen class to be decreased by ten. However, there were four -- Mary Jo Molson, Donna Smith, Ed Mathews, and Jerry Rees -- who came (and stayed). This year was preparation for the next three. They learned all about high school parties, high school sports, etc., and how little appreciated freshmen are. They also formed opinions of the faculty which included Miss Maxon, Mesdames Berry, Cassaday, Keeton, Scott, and Varner, and Messrs Herrick, Lancaster, Schuler, Sims, Sloan, and Smith.

According to its members, the sophomore year is the year to have fun. According to the faculty, its the time to work hard. The sophs therefore compromised and did both. The realization that the sophomore class was then "broke" didn't faze its members; they pitched in and earned $160 with a car wash and a bake sale. That pleased the "banquet-minded" juniors. The class also added Norman Dodd to its membership that year.

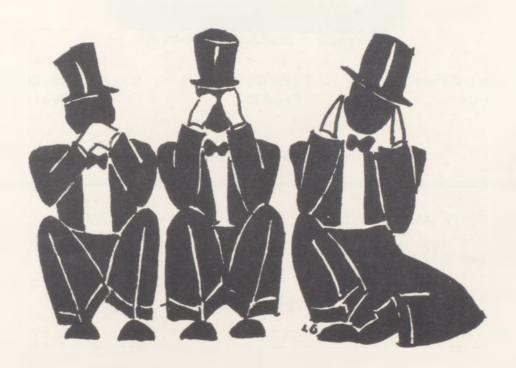

The junior year is the year to make plans and money. To make money, the juniors assessed high dues; sold pop; and staged a successful play, DEADLY ERNEST. Plans were made for the Junior - Senior Banquet and Prom, and the style of class ring and announcements were selected. Lavetta Darr brought the class to its present size.

The senior year is the year to spend money -- money for class rings, money for senior pictures, money for announcements, and money for skip day. Since the class wanted to visit Omaha, it presented THE SKELETON WALKS, a play, and earned $190 to break a record. The seniors have also tried to make Johnston High a better school than it was before they came.

The seniors of '58 have a history similar to others in some respects yet unique in many others. There will be other senior classes at Johnston, but never a class quite like the class of 1958.
